

1. Customer Support Policy Overview

Nimbus Commerce operates an online marketplace selling apparel, footwear, electronics, home appliances, beauty and personal-care products, furniture, sports equipment, accessories, and selected digital products.

This knowledge base defines the default customer-support rules for orders placed directly through Nimbus Commerce. Individual product pages, promotional campaigns, seller-specific terms, and legally mandatory consumer rights may override a general rule when explicitly stated.

Customer-support agents should identify the customer's order number, product category, fulfillment method, payment method, order status, delivery date, and issue type before deciding eligibility. If a policy depends on information stored in the order system, the agent must use the order-data tool rather than guessing.

A policy answer should distinguish between: - what the customer is eligible to request, - what Nimbus Commerce has approved, - what action has already been performed, - and what action is still pending.

When two rules appear to conflict, the more specific rule normally takes precedence over a general rule. For example, a category-specific warranty term overrides the generic warranty term, and a promotion-specific return rule overrides the normal return window when the promotion explicitly states that restriction.
