

12. Damaged-Item Claim Process

Customers who receive visibly damaged or defective products should contact Nimbus Commerce promptly.

12.1 Claim Window

A transit-damage claim should normally be reported within 48 hours of delivery. Manufacturing-defect claims may follow the applicable warranty or defect process even when the 48-hour transit-damage window has passed.

12.2 Evidence

Depending on the claim, support may request: - photos of the product, - photos of the shipping box, - photos of shipping labels, - close-up images of the damage, - video showing a functional defect, - serial number, - packaging condition.

Evidence requirements are proportional to the claim. Customers should not be required to provide unnecessary information.

12.3 Resolution

Eligible claims may result in: - replacement, - repair, - full refund, - partial refund, - store credit, - manufacturer warranty service.

If the product is unsafe, the customer should stop using it and follow the support team's handling instructions.

12.4 Severe Damage

For broken glass, exposed electrical components, leaking batteries, overheating devices, or other potentially hazardous conditions, the standard return workflow should not be used until support has provided safe handling instructions.
