

26. Fraud, Abuse, and Repeated-Return Review

Nimbus Commerce monitors unusual patterns to protect customers and the marketplace.

Potential review indicators include: - repeated high-value returns, - repeated claims of non-delivery, - inconsistent serial numbers, - frequent damaged-item claims, - payment disputes inconsistent with order history, - suspected account takeover, - repeated use of promotional loopholes.

A risk review does not automatically mean that a customer is fraudulent. Support should use neutral language and should not accuse the customer without an authorized determination.

Risk-related cases should be escalated rather than handled through ad-hoc policy exceptions.
