

27. Customer Communication Standards

Support responses should be clear, specific, and action-oriented.

A good response should normally contain: 1. the current status, 2. the applicable policy, 3. the customer's eligibility, 4. the next action, 5. the expected timeframe, 6. any information the customer needs to provide.

Avoid statements such as “your refund is coming soon” when a precise operational status is available. Prefer “Your refund was initiated on 28 August; bank posting normally requires 2–5 business days.”

Agents should not promise a result that requires another team's approval. For example, “we will replace the item” should only be used when replacement approval is already confirmed.
